

Construction Management

Undergraduate Certificate

Upskill to Advance Your Career in Construction Management

With many construction managers entering retirement age, opportunities abound for skilled tradespeople to level-up into management roles. Prepare for a supervisory or management career through this certificate designed for construction tradespeople and workers who have completed an apprenticeship or have related construction experience. You'll gain knowledge and skill sets in people and project management, safety and regulations, leadership, and construction finance. The 100% online option makes it convenient to earn your certificate while balancing personal and professional commitments.

This certificate is a valuable standalone credential and can also serve as a stepping stone to a WilmU bachelor's degree. All 18 credits can be applied to the B.S. in Applied Business. In addition, construction workers who have completed a Delaware apprenticeship have an opportunity to receive up to 42 WilmU academic credits for their work experience. By combining those opportunities, you could find yourself halfway toward completion of a 120-credit bachelor's degree program.
